If both players play perfectly, the game ends in a draw. Below you will find the same strategies and tactics when playing tic-tac-toe. When you start playing tic-tac-toe Play your first X in the corner In this example, the player who has the X will play first to win. When you play first, place an X on the corner square. If the opponent does not play in the centerYou will definitely win! Place your second cross in the middle to force the opponent to block you. Then place your third cross on one of the border squares next to your first move. So you get a double winning move and your opponent can only block one of them. give you the win If your opponent takes the center If your opponent follows you by taking the center on the first move, you may still have a chance to win if your opponent makes a mistake later in the game. Otherwise, each player's ideal turn order ends in a draw. In response, place your second X in the opposite corner square, diagonally from the square where you made your first move. The position of each player is X-O-X. Play the last available corner and you'll have double the chance to win! If your opponent takes one of the other corner squares, you can be sure of victory. Win at tic-tac-toe when your opponent doesn't follow the middle. Your victory is guaranteed if your opponent moves his O anywhere but in the middle. In response, place your second X in the corner, leaving an empty space next to the first X. In this case, if you don't play first, you still have a chance of a draw if you don't make mistakes. If your opponent places an O in the corner square as his first move, systematically place your X in the center square. If your opponent places his second O in one of the remaining corner squares, place your X not in the corner, but in one of the boundary squares. This forces your opponent to react rather than attack. Then you can expect to win if your opponent makes a mistake. Otherwise, the game ends in a forced draw. WhenThe opponent starts the game with the first move on the tic-tac-toe edge. If your opponent is a noob, he will probably start from the edge. Place your X in the center of the field immediately. If your opponent responds by placing a second O opposite their first move (creating an O-X-O), place a second X on the corner square. When your opponent places his third O to block your winning move (creating an X-X-O diagonal). Then make your next move by placing a cross in another corner square, allowing you to block your opponent and create a double diagonal. This will ensure your victory!
