Helen Keller: Later in Life

After she graduated from Radcliffe College, Helen Keller decided that she would devote her life to helping others who were blind. She wrote magazine articles and books. She also gave speeches. She became one of the most popular speakers in America. She and Anne Sullivan traveled around the country. They spoke to many different people. In 1930, Helen and Anne began a new adventure. They created a movieville on. This movie-making show started them a lot of money, sometimes as much as $1000 per week!

When Helen was in her mid-fifties, she became very close of a partner for the blind. She joined the staff of the American Foundation for the Blind. She was a great fund raiser for the group. Many famous people were willing to donate to the organization because Helen's story was so inspiring. Many that said like G. Rockefeller, one of the wealthiest men at that time gave to the foundation.

Helen's life experiences and job helped her to meet some very special people. Helen met every president from Truman to Eisenhower. During World War II, Helen spent time visiting wounded and blind soldiers in military hospitals. Her kind presence in the hospitals was like a ray of sunshine. Helen's visits gave each soldier a special gift: the gift of hope. Helen said that working with the wounded soldiers was "the crowning experience of her life."

After the war, Helen went on many worldwide tours. She continued to work on behalf of blind people everywhere. In 1964 President Lyndon Johnson gave Helen a great honor. He awarded her the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Four years later, on June 1, 1985, Helen Keller died. She fought, however, first and in the hope that she gave to countless people around the world. Helen Keller was truly an inspiration!

Name: _____
Helen Keller's Mischief

Helen Keller's world was pitch black and silent. After a fever left her blind and deaf, Helen's early years were difficult. It was hard for her to communicate her needs, wants, and feelings with those around her. This often left her frustrated. Sometimes her frustration led to tantrums. Other times it led to mischief.

Once when Helen was five, she locked her mother in the pantry. Kate Keller screamed and pounded on the door. Helen did not help her. Instead, she sat on the porch steps and laughed. Mrs. Keller was stuck in the pantry for three hours before someone found her and unlocked the door.

On another occasion, young Helen and her friend Martha were cutting paper. After a while they got bored with that and decided to use their scissors to cut other things. The girls cut their shoelaces. They also cut lemons. Then they started to cut each other's hair! Thankfully, Mrs. Keller stopped the game before both girls were bald!

At times, Helen's frustration was dangerous. One day Helen wanted to play with her favorite doll, cradle. When she reached it, she realized there was something inside it. It was a baby but not a baby doll. Helen's baby sister, Mildred, was sleeping in the cradle. This infuriated Helen! In a rage, she toppled the cradle over. Thankfully, Mildred was not hurt. The Kellers knew then and there that they must find help for Helen.

Helen Keller

When Helen Keller was just a baby, she was very ill. From then on, she could not see. She could not hear. She did not learn to talk when other children did.

Think what that would be like! Dark a world is dark and quiet. You could not see all the kinds of flowers and animals. You would not hear someone's friend's voice. You would not even know what your friend looked like. This was Helen's world - still and dark.

There seemed to be no way to teach Helen. For a long time her parents did not know what to do for her. Then, when she was six years old, they got a teacher. Her name was Annie Sullivan. She was almost blind herself. She felt she could help Helen learn to lead a full life.

Annie found it hard to teach Helen. The child was a wild thing! She yelled and shouted in a strange voice. She pulled Annie's hair and bit her. But Annie was wise. And, in the end, Helen came to love her.

By and by, Helen learned to "hear" by putting her hands on people's throats. She could feel their breath. She learned to read books made just for the blind. She learned to talk, too.

Everyone was surprised at what Helen could do. Years ago, people like her just sat in their dark worlds. No one had time for them. No one knew what to do for them. But Helen went to school. She did well there. As time went on, she wrote books. She gave talks. She helped the blind.

Helen had grown to be a wise, busy woman. The wild young girl had come a long way!

Helen keller answer key. What are some facts about helen keller. I am helen keller comprehension questions.

Helen Keller, born 1880, was stricken with a disease as a toddler and lost her hearing and sight. However, her family found a teacher who taught Helen to sign, read, and speak. Helen became a celebrity, and was very well educated. She wrote many books and became an activist for many causes. In this passage from her autobiography, Helen discusses the people she has known and met-----Would that I could enrich this sketch with the names of all those who have ministered to my happiness! Some of them would be found written in our literature and dear to the hearts of many, while others would be wholly unknown to most of my readers. But their influence, though it escapes fame, shall live immortal in the lives that have been sweetened and ennobled by it. Those are red-letter days in our lives when we meet people who thrill us like a fine poem, people whose handshake is brimful of unspoken sympathy, and whose sweet, rich natures impart to our eager, impatient spirits a wonderful restfulness which, in its essence, is divine. The perplexities, irritations and worries that have absorbed us pass like unpleasant dreams, and we wake to see with new eyes and hear with new ears the beauty and harmony of God's real world. The solemn nothings that fill our everyday life blossom suddenly into bright possibilities. In a word, while such friends are near us we feel that all is well. Perhaps we never saw them before, and they may never cross our life's path again; but the influence of their calm, mellow natures is a libation poured upon our discontent, and we feel its healing touch, as the ocean feels the mountain stream freshening its brine.I have often been asked, "Do not people bore you?" I do not understand quite what that means. I suppose the calls of the stupid and curious, especially of newspaper reporters, are always inopportune. I also dislike people who try to talk down to my understanding. They are like people who when walking with you try to shorten their steps to suit yours; the hypocrisy in both cases is equally exasperating.The hands of those I meet are dumbly eloquent to me. The touch of some hands is an impertinence. I have met people so empty of joy, that when I clasped their frosty finger tips, it seemed as if I were shaking hands with a northeast storm. Others there are whose hands have sunbeams in them, so that their grasp warms my heart. It may be only the clinging touch of a child's hand; but there is as much potential sunshine in it for me as there is in a loving glance for others. A hearty handshake or a friendly letter gives me genuine pleasure.I have many far-off friends whom I have never seen. Indeed they are so many that I have often been unable to reply to their letters; but I wish to say here that I am always grateful for their kind words, however insufficiently I acknowledge them. Build a proofreading activity Helen Keller By Tammy Scarbrough 1 Helen Adams Keller was born in June of 1880 with ears that could hear and eyes that could see. Her family lived in a house that was built by her grandparents. 2 When she was just 19 months old, Helen got very sick. She got sick with a terrible fever. Everyone thought she would die. The fever finally went away, and her parents thought she was well again. But something was wrong. Her mother noticed that Helen did not respond to the dinner bell, and she could not see her mother's hand when she passed it in front of Helen's face. At this point, her parents realized that the fever had struck Helen blind and deaf. 3 The doctors told Helen's parents about someone who was very good at helping deaf people. His name was Alexander Graham Bell. Mr. Bell helped the family find a good teacher for Helen. Her name was Anne Sullivan.Paragraphs 4 to 6:For the complete story with questions: click here for printable Weekly Reading Books Create Weekly Reading Books Prepare for an entire week at once!
